new horizon, new questions

You're retiring and have a decision to make about your health coverage...

Decisions you make at the time of retirement can affect your healthcare coverage in the future, so it is important to be aware of your options.

Retirement Basics

When you retire you are entitled to continue your MUST health coverage through the group's plan as long as 1) you have coverage in place prior to retirement and 2) the group retains MUST coverage. You must meet eligibility requirements and, if you choose to continue coverage, you will probably be responsible for paying the premiums. If you drop MUST coverage after you retire you will not be eligible to reinsta coverage. However, if you are subsequently employed by another MUST group you may become eligible under the new group's coverage again as an active employee. If you are married and drop coverage due to reaching Medicare age and your spouse would like to continue coverage, your spouse is eligible for 36 months of continued coverage through COBRA. Be sure to let us know if this is the case.

MUST Benefits and Medicare

You can keep your MUST coverage even if you are covered by Medicare. If you are retired and over age 65, Medicare will be your primary coverage and MUST secondary.

If you are active (working) and become Medicare-eligible at age 65, your MUST coverage will remain primary until you retire. Upon reaching retirement and age 65, your premium may be adjusted (contact your district clerk, group business manager, or MUST).

If you become covered under another plan through active employment, your employer's plan will become primary for you (and possibly your spouse) and MUST will become secondary. If your spouse is covered under another plan through employment, your spouse's plan remains primary.
